Where it All Began

Even before Sanjana arrived at Smith Stearns Tennis Academy, she'd racked up impressive accolades. The Chicago Post-Tribune named her the 2019 Girls Tennis Player of the Year. They described Sanjana with, "Relentless ambition. Elite desire to accomplish her goals. Impeccable work ethic. Unlimited skill level. Strong family support system."

Sanjana began playing tennis at age of four in her hometown outside the Chicago, Illinois area in Munster, Indiana. Her older sister began in tennis first (Sanj is one of four girls) and then Sanj followed. Sanjana learned tennis at Match Point Tennis and Fitness Club in Griffith, IN, and then transferred over to Score Tennis and Fitness in Countryside, IL where she trained from age nine to sixteen.

Although tennis isn't a family tradition, her parents have enthusiastically supported Sanjana every step of the way. Sanjana stated, "I'm so thankful for my parents and my sisters for always believing in me, supporting me, pushing me, and loving me beyond belief." She explained that they've been her pillars of strength and role models throughout her life. "I'm so grateful for all that my parents have provided. They've worked so hard, always inspiring me. They've given me the courage to overcome any adversity in life."

Life at Smith Stearns

Sanjana began visiting Smith Stearns at age 15 and then enrolled full-time during her junior year. She said, "One of the reasons I was attracted were the people and the team-like atmosphere." She was drawn to how students at the Academy would drive each other forward. Sanjana continued, "The training is one of the best parts about Smith Stearns. The intensity, and most of all the passion that the coaches demonstrate every day motivates us to push each other day in and day out.”

The Smith Stearns housing program is also one of Sanjana’s favorite aspects of the Academy. She’s also very thankful for her houseparent, Eileen Gilchrist. “She’s been my rock throughout my time here. She’s been a second mom and has always advised me, pushed me, disciplined me, and most of all loved me.”

When asked what are some of the most important life skills she’s gained while at Academy, Sanjana replied that time management, discipline, and learning how to work with others have been incredibly valuable life lessons. In order to handle the intense practice schedule and heavy school load, she’s learned to manage her time efficiently. In addition, she stated, “Living with eight to nine different girls is not easy, as there are many varying personalities. However, I’ve learned to adapt and live harmoniously with each type of person.”
